48th European Rally

“Future under construction – Youth @ work in Europe”

Globalization, Climate Change or Web 2.0 are just a few catchwords which are used to describe the present status and changes in world and society. Many people fear the power of these changes as something incontrollable, cold and inhumane. In the Rural Youth Europe European Rally 2007 we want to change our point of view. We want to analyse the impacts of actual developments on rural areas all over Europe. With the knowledge we can gain from such an analysis we want to design strategies for a future that keeps perspectives to live and to stay in rural areas. How do we want to work in future? In what way will we participate in society and decision making? How can we include all members of society in this future?

Rural Youth Europe is celebrating its 50th anniversary in 2007. The organization itself and its members have experienced lots of changes and challenges in their history. During the Rally we are going to learn about the different histories and experiences of the member organizations and their countries' cultures. From this we will try to deduce differences and common values which can be useful for future cooperation in Rural Youth matters as well as for each individual.

AIMS AND OBJECTIVES

The aim of the project:

- To strengthen the network of rural youth organisations in Europe,
- to take an active role on participation of rural youth starting from local to European level
- to save identity within organisations within the process of globalisation and sustainable development, through sharing of experience, best practise and developing a common strategy among European rural youth organisations.

The objectives

- To increase knowledge of young people from national rural youth organisations on participation and lobbying skills by using national and international organisations
- To give opportunity to participants from different countries to share experience and ideas regarding development issues of rural youth organisations
- To foster intercultural learning and exploring the cultural diversity of countries and member organisations
- Direct exchange of experience between multipliers from rural areas with regard to promoting international youth exchange and intercultural dialogue
- To get to know national, economical, social, regional differences and experience local cultural traditions

VENUE

The Agricultural Education and Research Centre “Haus Duesse” is located in the mid-west of Germany, in the state of Northrhine-Westphalia, about 50 km east of Dortmund. The State of Northrhine-Westphalia is with approximately 17 million people the largest state (or "Bundesland") by inhabitants in Germany. The Ruhr-bassin as an old industrial area and the big cities at the Rhine like Cologne or Duesseldorf are the more urban areas of the state. But it also consists of many rural parts with lots of different types of landscape, traditions and cultures.
